LEASEHOLD CONDOMINIUMS

I. INTRODUCTION

Prior to the approval of the Uniform Condominium Act by the Uniform Law Commission in 1977, few state condominium enabling statutes included specific provisions on submission of a leasehold interest to the condominium form of ownership.¹ In 1994, Texas adopted the Texas Uniform Condominium Act (the “Act”)² using the Uniform Condominium Act as its base. The Texas Uniform Condominium Act includes definitions, disclosures and a few requirements tailored for the leasehold condominium project. Despite an active condominium practice over the last 25 years, using a lease, as opposed to fee title to land, as the founding real estate interest submitted to a condominium declaration has been relatively rare.³ If our recent experience is any indication, change is in the air, principally owing to the rise and stability, over the last several years, of vertical and horizontal mixed-use projects. Properly structured vertical and horizontal mixed-use projects have proven finance ability and marketability and have achieved acceptance in the market. There is inherent and recognized power in segregating ownership and uses in a mixed-use project. Among other things, segregation of ownership allows stakeholders with specific use expertise to operate and find capital to construct, improve, or refinance their specific component of the project. However, there are situations where the transfer of fee ownership is constrained, either through local or state regulatory restrictions or private investment goals or requirements. A state university or municipality may be required to own land which would prohibit diversity of fee title ownership in a mixed-use project. A private land owner may need to retain ownership for estate preservation purposes or may be restricted from the conveyance of land held by a trust. These “fee constrained” parties have begun to recognize the benefits of mixed-use. Whether it’s a state university contemplating a public private partnership, or a trustee considering ways to increase the value and returns on a family legacy asset, the leasehold condominium structure is an alternative for projects where fee title must be retained and cannot be transferred.

II. THE BASICS

A. What is a Leasehold Condominium?

A leasehold condominium is created when a leasehold interest in land, as opposed to fee title to land, is submitted to a condominium declaration. There are legal, financing, and operational implications to submission of a leasehold interest rather than fee title to a condominium declaration, but the condominium declaration and condominium regime organizational and supporting documents are often virtually identical. The condominium declaration will describe the units created out of the leasehold interest and there should be no difference in how the physical boundaries of each unit are described as compared to the traditional non-leasehold condominium. Provisions related to operation and administration of the condominium association, common interest and common expense allocations, and use restrictions are often the same for the leasehold and non-leasehold condominium. The leasehold condominium declaration will differ with respect to its term, which will most often be co-terminus with the term of the underlying ground lease. Insurance provisions may be different for leasehold condominium projects that are restricted to commercial use. Casualty and condemnation provisions may be different than the non-leasehold condominium declaration dependent on corresponding provisions of the underlying lease.

The real property interest⁴ submitted to a leasehold condominium declaration will most frequently be a ground lease and include the entire land area comprising the project. However, the lease need not cover the entire project⁵, nor is it required that the lease comprise an area of the surface of land. For example, in the former case, the project area may be composed of a portion of land where fee title is submitted to the condominium declaration, and an adjacent tract where only the certain tax benefits related to the leasehold condominium structure, but those issues are beyond the scope of this paper.

³ Yes, there are, and have been, leasehold condominiums in Texas. Historically, these projects have been clustered within central business districts and most often are relegated to pure commercial use segregations, e.g., separate horizontal office building segregations on land owned by a single land owner, or relatively simplistic vertical dual use projects, e.g., office and retail. There are, of course, exceptions. There are also

leasehold estate is submitted to the condominium declaration.⁶ In the latter case, the lease may pertain to subsurface components of the land only, e.g., a parking garage.⁷

When land is submitted to a condominium declaration, the declaration creates separate condominium units which, when conveyed, are owned by the grantee, and common elements which are owned in undivided interests by all unit owners. When a lease is submitted to the condominium declaration, the declaration also creates units and common elements. However, when conveyed, the grantee receives an exclusive possessory interest in the leasehold unit and an undivided possessory interest in the common elements. Interestingly, and by virtue of submitting a ground lease to a condominium declaration and creating leasehold condominium units, the exclusive possessory interest in the leasehold condominium unit and undivided interest in the common elements are conveyed by deed from the lessee under the lease to each grantee.⁸ In addition, each of the leasehold condominiums created by the declaration and each undivided interest in common elements appurtenant to such unit is separately taxed for ad valorem tax purposes.⁹

If the lessee submits a ground lease to a condominium declaration, on the date of submission the traditional and binary relationship between land owner and lessee is converted to a relationship between the land owner and the leasehold condominium unit owners and the condominium association. As discussed in Section II.B and Section III.F of this article, the lease provisions are enforceable against leasehold unit owners, but there are limits on termination for non-compliance. Also, certain obligations of the lessee, in particular the obligation to pay leasehold rents will often be undertaken and coordinated by the condominium association, as opposed to the owners of the units.

B. Texas Nuts and Bolts

The word “leasehold” used in the context of a leasehold condominium is used only twelve times in the Act, and primarily relates to the Act’s requirement that certain basic provisions of the lease be disclosed in the condominium declaration. The lack of specific and detailed guidance means there is often very little difference between the leasehold and non-leasehold condominium declaration and supporting documentation.¹⁰ However, the Act is purposefully flexible¹¹ and modifications to the declaration may be appropriate as further described in Section III of this article.

Section 82.003(a)(16) of the Act defines a leasehold condominium as “a condominium in which all or a portion of the real property is subject to a lease the expiration or termination of which will terminate the condominium or reduce its size.” Section 82.003(a)(24) of the Act includes, in the definition of unit owner, a “lessee of a unit in a leasehold condominium.” The principal leasehold condominium provision in the Act is Section 82.056. Section 82.056 of the Act includes specific requirements for the lease, specific disclosures that must be made in the condominium declaration, and limitations on a lessor’s enforcement rights under the lease. Section 82.056(a) of the Act requires that if termination of the lease will terminate the condominium or reduce the size of the condominium, the lease must be recorded. There is no support in the Act for recording a memorandum of the lease. Section 82.056(a) of the ⁶ A blended regime consisting of leased and non-leased land poses challenges, most notably the fact that termination of the lease will either terminate the regime entirely, or at least as to the area subject to the lease. It is seldom the case that the project will be constructed in a manner that will permit a clean operational divorce of the leased and non-leased portion of the project. In most circumstances, termination of the entire regime (or renewal of the lease to avoid termination) is the only practical solution short of major redevelopment.

⁹ See Section 82.005 of the Act. Section 82.005 does not distinguish between leasehold and non-leasehold condominiums.

¹¹ Section 82.004 of the of the Texas Property Code provides that the provisions cannot be varied unless expressly permitted. Certain provisions of Chapter 82 are expressly permitted to be modified or supplemented by the condominium declaration, e.g., Section 82.052 [Unit Boundaries], Section 82.055(17) [Contents of Declaration for all Condominiums], Section 82.057 [Allocation of Common Element Interests, Votes, and Common Expense Liabilities], Section 82.058 [Limited Common Elements], Section 82.059 [Plat and Plans], Section 82.060 [Exercise of Development Right], Section 82.061 [Alteration of Units], Section 82.062 [Relocation of Boundaries between Adjoining Units], Section 82.063 [Subdivision of Units], Section 82.065 [Use for Sales Purposes], Section 82.066 [Easement Rights], Section 82.102 [Powers of Unit Owners’ Association], Section 82.107 [Upkeep of Condominium]. Certain other provisions may be modified if the condominium project is restricted to commercial use, e.g., Section 82.111 [Insurance], Subchapter D [Protection of Purchasers].

Act further provides that the lessor must sign the condominium declaration.¹²

Section 82.056(a) of the Act requires that the following information regarding the lease be stated in the condominium declaration:

- (1) the recording data for the lease;
- (2) the date on which the lease is scheduled to expire;
- (3) a legally sufficient description of the real property subject to the lease;
- (4) any right of the unit owners to redeem the reversion and the manner in which the unit owners may exercise that right, or a statement that the unit owners do not have that right;
- (5) any right of the unit owners to remove improvements within a reasonable time after the expiration or termination of the lease, or a statement that the unit owners do not have that right; and
- (6) any right of the unit owners to renew the lease and the conditions of renewal, or a statement that the unit owners do not have that right.

In our experience, a right of redemption is rare. Most leases that are appropriate for the purpose of submission to a condominium declaration have long lease terms, usually 99 years. Determination of a valuation methodology for redemption is just too uncertain. It is also unusual to see detailed provisions for the removal of improvements. For legacy leases, that is existing leases negotiated without any expectation that the lease will be submitted to a condominium declaration, these provisions and other complex requirements are more likely and can be quite challenging to harmonize with the Act and stakeholder expectations. As discussed in more detail in Section III of this article, legacy leases have several challenges notwithstanding the requirement that the lessor consent to submission of the leasehold interest to the condominium declaration.

Section 82.056(b) is the lynchpin of viability and marketability for the leasehold condominium. Section 82.056(b) provides as follows:

After the declaration for a leasehold condominium is recorded, neither the lessor nor the lessor's successor in interest may terminate the leasehold interest of a unit owner who makes timely payment of the unit owner's share of the rent and otherwise complies with all covenants that, if violated, would entitle the lessor to terminate the lease. A unit owner's leasehold interest is not affected by failure of any other person to pay rent or fulfill any other covenant.

A lease is ordinarily a binary relationship between the land owner and its lessee. Section 82.056(b), in effect, converts this binary relationship into a collective relationship between the lessor and multiple parties, specifically all leasehold condominium unit owners and the condominium association.¹³ In the binary relationship, if the lessee fails to pay rent the lessor can terminate the lease. If the lease is submitted to a condominium declaration, the lease rent is allocated among each leasehold condominium unit owner, usually based on their undivided interest in the common elements (though this may differ in a commercial project as discussed in Section III.E of this article). In such case, the proportionate share of rent is most often characterized as an assessment under the condominium declaration, collected by the association, and then remitted by the association to the lessor. If a leasehold unit owner fails to pay their proportionate share of the lease rent, and assuming that at least one unit owner pays their proportionate share, the lessor may not terminate the lease, but instead may only terminate the defaulting unit owner's right of possession. In effect, the lessor is now the owner of the defaulting owner's leasehold unit.¹⁴ Often complicating matters, and in particular when a legacy lease is proposed for submission to a condominium declaration, are lease covenants that are not so easily allocated to each unit owner. Examples include covenants related to insurance, shared area maintenance, or any other condition where uniformity of compliance is necessary to achieve the underlying purpose of the condition. The condominium declaration may require that the condominium association obtain the required insurance and maintain shared areas in accordance with the conditions and standards required by the underlying lease. What happens if the association fails to obtain the required insurance or fails to maintain shared areas in conformance with the lease? The plain language of ¹² Section 82.051(a) of the of the Texas Property Code also provides that "A condominium may be created under this chapter only by recording a declaration executed in the same manner as a deed by all persons who have an interest in the real property that will be conveyed to unit owners and by every lessor of a lease the expiration or termination of which will terminate the condominium or reduce its size." (emphasis added).

Section 82.056(b), supported by comments to the Uniform Condominium Act¹⁵, suggests that only those obligations that can be (or are) severed and fulfilled by a unit owner are enforceable against a unit owner. Section 82.111 of the Act requires the condominium association to obtain and maintain property insurance. Section 82.107 of the Act vests in the condominium association the obligation to maintain the common elements in the condominium. If the condominium declaration requires the association to obtain and maintain the required insurance and requires that the condominium association maintain the shared areas, those obligations are not severed and assigned to unit owners. On the other hand, the requirement that the association obtain and maintain insurance can be modified if the condominiums are restricted to commercial use,¹⁶ and the maintenance common elements or shared components can be assigned to specific unit owners.¹⁷ Modification of the insurance provisions and allocation of common element maintenance to specific unit owners may be desirable in certain mixed-use projects where one or more of the units will be owned by sophisticated commercial operators with access to risk management expertise, favorable master insurance programs, and on-site maintenance staff. However, fractionalizing these obligations by assignment to a unit owner could expose the owner to a default under the lease if the owner failed to comply with the assigned obligation.

III. DRAFTING CONSIDERATIONS

A. Legacy and Non-Legacy Leases

A legacy lease, for the purpose of this article, is a lease already in place that has been negotiated between the parties without any consideration or expectation that the lease would be submitted to a condominium declaration. A legacy lease also includes a lease that has been negotiated but is not yet in effect, was negotiated between the parties without any consideration or expectation that the lease would be submitted to a condominium declaration, and due to political or legal considerations cannot practically be revised, modified or amended. An ideal lease is a lease that has been negotiated and drafted knowing in advance that the lease will be submitted to a condominium declaration to create leasehold condominiums. Attached as Exhibit

“A” is an example of an ideal lease, but the lease you draft will not likely be ideal. Whether you are drafting the lease for the land owner or reviewing the lease for the developer who intends to submit the lease to a condominium declaration, your ideal lease will very likely be more detailed, include special provisions, and perhaps a complex rent structure.

This Section III discusses selected drafting considerations when submitting a leasehold interest to a condominium declaration. If you are working with a legacy lease, the hard work involves harmonizing legacy lease provisions with the Act, determining, allocating and assigning lease obligations, attempting to conform a new ownership and operational structure with the binary nature of the lease, and explaining all this to your client, their lender, insurance consultants, surveyors, budget preparers, and the lessor. If you are fortunate enough to be working with a non-legacy lease, the dynamic is different, but there are still challenges you must confront and resolve.

B. Term: Automatic Termination

In Texas, a leasehold condominium is defined as a condominium that will terminate as to the real estate subject to the lease when the lease terminates.¹⁸ In other words, termination of the lease automatically terminates the condominium declaration as to the leasehold estate. There is usually no “automatic” termination for a non-leasehold condominium. Instead, for the non-leasehold condominium, termination occurs when approved by condominium unit owners.¹⁹

If the entire leasehold estate is made subject to the condominium declaration, except in unusual cases, the term of the condominium declaration should be the same as the term of the lease. If the real estate submitted to the condominium declaration is composed of a leasehold interest and fee simple title, and the project is designed and constructed in a manner that operation of the improvements is impractical or impossible without the leasehold real estate, e.g., where an integrated building with critical shared components is constructed on a parcel composed of a leasehold and a fee interest in the real estate, the term of the condominium declaration should also be the same as the term of the lease.

There is no required minimum term for a ground lease as a condition to creation of a leasehold

¹⁵ Comment 4 to § 2-106 of the Uniform Condominium Act provides that § 2-106(b), which is the same as Section 82.056(b) of the Act, “protects the unit owner by assuring that the unit owner will not share with fellow unit owners any collective obligations toward their common lessor.” (emphasis added)

¹⁶ See Section 82.111(m) of the Texas Property Code.

¹⁷ Section 82.107 of the Texas Property Code is a provision that can be modified by the condominium declaration.

¹⁸ Section 82.003(a)(16) of the Texas Property Code.

condominium, but the term will usually be between fifty (50) and ninety nine (99) years. For a project that does not include residential for sale product, if financing will be obtained for the project and one or all of the leasehold condominiums will form all or part of the collateral for the loan, the term of the lease should be at least be equivalent to the term of the loan. If the lease includes an extension option, the term of the loan can exceed the initial lease term provided the extension option can be exercised by the lessee.²⁰ If the project includes for sale residential product and acquisition of leasehold units will be financed through the traditional residential mortgage loan process, a ninety nine (99) year term is customary.²¹

C. Insurance: Synchronizing the Lease with the Act

Section 82.111 of the Act includes minimum insurance requirements for a condominium. Specifically, the condominium association is required to maintain property insurance and commercial general liability insurance, and the policies must conform to certain conditions.²² The requirements set forth in Section 82.111 may not be modified unless all the units in regime are restricted to non-residential use.²³ As noted, Section 82.111 includes the minimum requirements for insurance. The underlying ground lease may include additional and detailed insurance requirements, including minimum policy limits, lines of insurance, endorsements, etc., but those additional requirements may only apply to a specific use, user, or time period. For example, a ground lease might require that builder's risk be obtained and maintained in conjunction with construction of the project, that certain tenant improvements be insured, and/or that the lessee obtain and maintain worker compensation insurance or business interruption insurance. In essence, the lease presumes unity of obligation in a single lessee. When the lease is submitted to the condominium declaration and leasehold units are created, consideration must be given to how these insurance obligations should be allocated among the condominium association and leasehold unit owners. The assignment of insurance obligations to the association and each leasehold unit owner can be made in the condominium declaration, but the lease should be drafted in anticipation of the fact that these insurance requirements will most likely need to be allocated among multiple parties. See Exhibit "B" to this article for an example of a condominium declaration attachment that allocates insurance requirements to a condominium association. The ideal lease attached as Exhibit "A" only includes a requirement for liability insurance. The lessor under the ideal lease is relying on the statutory requirement that the condominium association will obtain property insurance for the project.

D. Casualty: Decision to Rebuild and Insurance Proceeds

Section 82.111(i) of the Act requires that if insurance proceeds are received by the condominium association as a result of damage to the project, the association must use the proceeds to repair the damage unless eighty percent (80%) of the unit owners elect not to make the repairs.²⁴ The ideal lease, attached as Exhibit "A", provides that the lessee controls all insurance proceeds and determines whether to restore the premises in the event of a casualty. As a result, when the ideal lease is submitted to the condominium declaration, there is no need to harmonize casualty lease provisions with the casualty provisions in the Act or the condominium declaration. As noted above, the provisions of Section 82.111 cannot be modified by the condominium declaration unless all the units in the condominium declaration are restricted to non-residential use. If the lease includes specific and detailed casualty provisions, the project is not restricted to non-residential use, and Section 82.111 is not modified to conform to the lease requirements, the casualty lease provisions may conflict with corresponding provisions in the Act. For example, if the lease requires that the lessee restore damage to improvements on the property and if those improvements are required to be insured by the condominium association under the Act, in the event

²² See Section 82.111(d) of the Texas Property Code for a list of insurance policy requirements.

²⁴ Section 82.111(i) of the Texas Property Code provides that if any portion of a condominium is damaged or destroyed and insurance is required to be obtained by the association for such damage or destruction, the damage or destruction must be "promptly repaired or replaced by the association unless [...] at least 80 percent of the unit owners vote to not rebuild. [...]" eighty percent (80%) of the unit owners elect not to restore, Section 82.111(i) of the Act requires that the insurance proceeds be distributed to the unit owners and their mortgagees.

E. Base Rent and Percentage Rent: Allocation to Leasehold Units

There are several methods used to determine rent under a ground lease, but two forms of rent are most prevalent: base rent and percentage rent. Base rent is usually a fixed initial sum which escalates over the lease term. Percentage rent is paid in addition to, or in lieu of, base rent and most often associated with retail use. Percentage rent is usually calculated based on the retail tenant's gross or net revenue.

If the ground lease includes base rent only, and if rent is not apportioned differently under the condominium declaration, base rent will be allocated among each leasehold condominium in accordance with the unit's allocated interest under the condominium declaration.²⁵ In most circumstances, the base rent will be collected by the condominium association along with the association's budgeted maintenance expenses through the levy of assessments against each unit. However, this need not be the case, and is often not the case unless the project includes only residential for-sale units. In a mixed-use project it is often desirable to minimize the functions of the condominium association.²⁶ Assigning the obligation for rent payments directly to a specific unit owner²⁷ who then pays their allocated share of rent directly to the lessor is a consistent practice under this approach.²⁸

Base rent can be apportioned among units in a manner that differs from the allocated interests and aligned with the specific agreement of the leasehold unit owners. In a project that includes retail and non-retail components, the lease often includes both base rent and percentage rent. In that case, the condominium declaration could apportion a larger share of base rent to the multi-family unit taking into consideration the fact that the rental unit will pay all percentage rent under the lease. See Exhibit "D" to this article for an example of a condominium declaration attachment that allocates base rent and percentage rent in a manner that differs from an allocation equal to the common expense liability assigned to each leasehold condominium unit.

F. Severable and Non-Severable Lease Obligations

In this article we have discussed fractionalizing lease obligations, meaning a process whereby specific requirements under the lease and generally applicable to a unitary lessee are assigned to a specific owner of a leasehold condominium unit. Some obligations are more easily fractionalized than others, e.g., rent; however, an obligation that may not seem easily assignable to a specific owner may actually be severable assuming that the lessor consents to the assignment. As noted in this article, the lessor of the leasehold interest submitted to the condominium declaration must execute the condominium declaration evidencing its consent thereto. Accordingly, the condominium declaration can be used as a means to modify the terms of the lease for the purpose of assigning lease obligations to specific unit owners. Separation and assignment of seemingly unseverable lease obligations to a specific leasehold condominium unit owner, for example the general lease requirement that the premises be maintained in good condition and repair, can be achieved by assigning those obligations as they relate to a specific unit and limiting the ground lessor's recourse to the unit owner who is assigned the obligation. Attached as Exhibit "C" are sample provisions used to allocate general lease obligations to a specific unit owner, establish self-help rights in favor of the non-defaulting owner, limit the lessor's remedies to the unit owner who was assigned the obligation, and providing for indemnification from components. In many of these projects the association often exists with little to do other than keep its charter in good standing with the Texas Secretary of State.

the defaulting owner for failure to comply with the leasehold obligations assigned to such owner. Exhibit “D” include a sample chart identifying leasehold obligations and their assignment to each unit, which forms a part of the condominium declaration and is attached as an exhibit thereto.

IV. CONCLUSION

Though by no means a new phenomenon, leasehold condominiums have become more prevalent as mixed-use projects and public private partnerships have become more popular in Texas. The friction lies between the process of coordinating two legal instruments, the lease and the condominium declaration, and harmonizing accepted conventions in commercial leasing with customary condominium practice and the Texas Uniform Condominium Act. While the Act expressly enables leasehold condominiums, it does very little to resolve the friction of the process. If you are in the enviable position of drafting a lease where you know the leasehold will be submitted to a condominium declaration you are a leg up, but there will be heavy lifting ahead. If you are faced with a legacy lease, the challenges may be difficult to overcome unless the lessor can be convinced that the benefits of a leasehold condominium protect the long-term financial stability of the project.

The creation of the Condominium Declaration and the conveyance of Units to Owners or the granting of deeds of trusts to Unit Mortgagees shall not require the consent of Lessor. However, no assignment of this Lease, nor any subleasing of the Premises, shall exonerate Lessee from its obligations hereunder. There are no limits to the number of times this Lease may be assigned by Lessee.

ARTICLE XI

- 11.01 Taking. If all or any portion of the Premises is permanently taken, and the remaining portion will not (in Lessee's sole discretion) be reasonably adequate for Lessee's residence, Lessee shall have the right to elect to terminate this Lease within ninety (90) days after the taking of permanent possession by public authority by delivering written notice thereof to Lessor. - 12.04 No Abatement. Lessee shall not be entitled to any abatement of Base Rent, nor shall any of its other obligations under this Lease be affected, as a result of any fire or casualty occurring during the Term.

- 13.02 Lessor's Remedies. Upon the occurrence of any Default by Lessee, (it being understood that this provision shall apply to an individual Non-Compliant Unit Owner, not a Compliant Unit Owner as provided in Section 1.02(c)(ii) of this Ground Lease, Lessor may, subject to the provisions hereinafter set forth regarding Unit Mortgagees, exercise any and all remedies available, at law or in equity, including, without limitation, terminating this Lease and re-entering the Premises under process of law. Notwithstanding any such termination or other action by Lessor, the liability of Lessee for the rents and charges provided for herein shall not be relinquished, diminished, or extinguished. It is further agreed that Lessee will pay, in addition to the rental and other sums agreed to be paid hereunder, such additional sums as a court may adjudge reasonable as attorneys' fees in any suit or action to collect the Base Rent then due or to become due to Lessor hereunder. Any personalty or other property belonging to Lessee or to any persons holding by, through, or under Lessee otherwise found upon the Premises, may be removed therefrom and stored in any public warehouse at the cost of and for the account of Lessee. If Lessee should abandon or surrender said Premises or be dispossessed by process of law, any personal property left upon the Premises may be deemed abandoned, at the option of Lessor, and Lessor, its agents or attorneys shall have the right, without further notice or demand, to re-enter and remove all persons and Lessee's property therefrom without being deemed guilty of any manner of trespass.
- 13.03 Interest Rate. If Lessor at any time, by reason of any Default by Lessee, is compelled to pay, or elects to pay, any sum of money, or is compelled to incur any expense, including reasonable attorneys' fees, in instituting or prosecuting any action or proceeding to construe or enforce Lessor's rights hereunder, the sum or sums so paid by Lessor, with interest thereon at the rate equal to the sum of (i) the prime rate then in effect at Wells Fargo Bank, National Association (or its successor institution if such bank does not then exist) plus (ii) two percent (2%), shall be deemed to be additional rental hereunder and shall be due from Lessee to Lessor on demand.

- 13.04 Cumulative Remedies. All rights and remedies of Lessor herein enumerated shall be cumulative and none shall exclude any other right or remedy allowed by law, and said rights and remedies may be exercised and enforced concurrently and whenever and as often as occasion therefor arises.

In the case of an assignment of a mortgage or other security instrument or change in address of such Unit Mortgagee, such assignee or Unit Mortgagee, by written notice to Lessor, may change the address to which such copies of notices are to be sent. Provided Lessor has been given written notice of such assignment of such mortgage, a copy of the executed assignment, and the name and address of the assignee, such assignee shall thereafter be deemed to be a Unit Mortgagee hereunder with respect to its mortgage.
- (b) Right to Cure. A Unit Mortgagee shall have the right, but not the obligation, to perform any of a Unit Owner's obligations hereunder and Lessor shall accept such performance by a Unit Mortgagee as performed by the Unit Owner. A Unit Mortgagee may enter the Premises to perform a Unit Owner's obligations hereunder.
- (c) Cure Period. If a Default by a Non-Compliant Unit Owner is not remedied within the cure period, if any, set forth in Section 13.01, then the Lessor shall give a Unit Mortgagee a further notice that such Default remains unremedied and the Unit Mortgagee shall have sixty (60) days from the date of receipt of such notice to cure any Default.
- (d) Force Majeure. During any occurrence of Force Majeure (as defined below), all cure periods hereunder shall be automatically extended for the period of time that the efforts of a Unit Mortgagee to cure a Default are prevented by Force Majeure. "Force Majeure" means catastrophic or unusual events such as fires, earthquakes, hurricanes or other acts of God, riots, sabotage, conflicts, insurrection, revolution, war, government actions or other causes beyond a Unit Mortgagee's reasonable control, including an inability to get possession of a Unit when possession is necessary to effect a cure.

(e) Disputes. During any bona fide dispute between Lessee or a Unit Mortgagee and Lessor as to whether a Default actually occurred, all cure periods hereunder shall be automatically extended for the period of time necessary to resolve such bona fide dispute.

(f) Foreclosure or Appointment of Receiver. The additional cure periods granted a Unit Mortgagee herein shall be automatically extended during the time period in which a Unit Mortgagee is attempting to acquire possession of a Unit or to have a receiver appointed, or to foreclose its Unit Mortgagee or to otherwise acquire a Unit ("Enforcement Proceeding"); provided, however, that any such Unit Mortgagee shall: (i) notify Lessor of its intention to institute an Enforcement Proceeding, (ii) promptly institute and diligently pursue the Enforcement Proceeding, and (iii) pay or cause to be paid to Lessor all then accrued but unpaid Base Rent as well as all Base Rent which becomes due during the Enforcement Period. Foreclosure of any Unit Mortgagee, or any sale thereunder, whether by judicial proceedings or by virtue of any power contained in the Unit Mortgagee, or any conveyance of a Unit Owner to any Unit Mortgagee or its designee through, or in lieu of, foreclosure or other appropriate proceedings in the nature thereof, shall not require the consent of Lessor or constitute a breach of any provision of or a default under this Lease, and upon such foreclosure, sale or conveyance Lessor shall recognize the purchaser or other transferee in connection therewith as the Unit Owner hereunder.

Nothing contained herein shall be deemed to require a Unit Mortgagee to continue with any Enforcement Proceeding or, if a Unit Mortgagee or its nominee or a receiver acquires possession of a Unit, to continue such possession. If the Unit Mortgagee, its nominee, or a purchaser in a foreclosure sale, shall acquire title to a Unit and shall cure all Defaults which are susceptible of being cured by the Unit Mortgagee or by said purchaser, as the case may be, then prior Defaults which are not susceptible to being cured by the Unit Mortgagee or by said purchaser shall no longer be deemed a Default hereunder. In the event that any Unit Mortgagee, or its nominee, fails to avail itself of its rights hereunder, or if, having done so elects not to continue to keep this Lease, or any replacement lease, in effect in accordance with its terms, then Lessor shall be permitted to exercise all rights and remedies under this Lease, or any such replacement lease, to terminate same and obtain possession of the Premises and all improvements located on the Premises.

- 14.03 Notice. If requested in writing by a Unit Mortgagee (which request shall specify an address to which notices shall be given), any notice, demand, request, approval or other communication which may be or is required to be given hereunder shall be given contemporaneously to the Unit Mortgagee. Any notice to a Unit Mortgagee shall be sent by certified or registered mail, return receipt requested, or overnight delivery service addressed to the Unit Mortgagee at the address specified in such request or such other address designated by the Unit Mortgagee from time to time in accordance with this Section 14.03.
- 14.04 Material Notices. Each Unit Mortgagee shall have the right, to the same extent that each Unit Owner has such right, to intervene in any and all litigation, arbitration, condemnation proceedings or adjustment of insurance claims and shall be made a party to such proceedings. The parties hereby consent to such intervention. In the event that any Unit Mortgagee shall not elect to intervene or become a party to the proceedings, such Unit Mortgagee shall receive notice and a copy of any award or decision made in connection therewith.
- 14.05 Non-Disturbance Agreements. The lien of any mortgage, deed of trust or indenture encumbering any interest of Lessor in the Premises or any part thereof shall either (i) be expressly subject and subordinate to this Lease so that no foreclosure of any mortgage, deed of trust or indenture will affect this Lease or (ii) the holder of any such mortgage, deed of trust or indenture shall expressly agree, in a writing executed in recordable form, that Lessee's rights under this Lease shall not be affected by any foreclosure.
- 14.06 No Lessee Lien on Fee. Under no circumstances shall Lessor be obligated to cause its fee estate in the Premises to secure any indebtedness incurred by Lessee.
- 14.07 Exculpation. No Unit Mortgagee or other entity succeeding owning a Unit through or subsequent to an Enforcement Proceeding shall be liable to Lessor under this Lease unless and until such time as it becomes the owner of the Unit and then only for the obligations which accrue during the period of time it owns the Unit; however, no such Unit Mortgagee or other entity succeeding to own a Unit shall be entitled to continue to enjoy the rights as a Unit Owner unless it performs the obligation of the Lessee hereunder, or under any replacement lease, in accordance with its terms. Under no circumstances, however, shall Leasehold Mortgagee or any such successor be subject to any personal or corporate liability hereunder and Lessor hereby acknowledges and agrees that it shall have no personal or corporate recourse against Leasehold Mortgagee or such successor, but Lessor shall look solely to the Leasehold Estate and the rents, issues and profits therefrom to satisfy any obligations of Leasehold Mortgagee or such successor hereunder.

14.08 Third Party Beneficiary. Lessor and Lessee acknowledge and agree that the provisions of this Article XIII are included herein for the purpose of inducing Leasehold Mortgagees to provide financing to Lessee and may be relied upon and enforced by any Leasehold Mortgagee as a third party beneficiary of such provisions.

ARTICLE XV

WAIVER OF SUBROGATION

Each party hereto waives any and every claim which arises or may arise in its favor against the other party hereto during the term of this Lease or any renewal or extension thereof for any and all loss of, or damage to, any of its property located within or upon, or constituting a part of, the Premises, to the extent such loss or damage is covered by valid and collectible fire and extended coverage or other insurance policies. Said mutual waivers shall be in addition to, and not in limitation or derogation of, any other waiver or release contained in this Lease with respect to any loss of, or damage to, property of the parties hereto. Inasmuch as the above mutual waivers will preclude the assignment of any aforesaid claim by way of subrogation (or otherwise) to an insurance company (or any other person), each party hereto hereby agrees immediately to give to each insurance company which has issued to it policies of fire and extended coverage or other insurance, written notice of the terms of said mutual waivers, and to have said insurance policies properly endorsed, if necessary, to prevent the invalidation of said insurance coverages by reason of said waiver.

ARTICLE XVI

AUTHORITY

16.01 Lessee's Authority. Lessee represents and warrants that (a) execution, delivery, and performance of this Lease has been duly authorized by all necessary action; that execution and performance hereof does not violate any judgment, order, agreement or regulation binding on Lessee or by which it is bound; (b) no consent from any person or entity is required; and (c) this Lease is fully binding and effective on Lessee.

16.02 Lessor's Authority. Lessor represents and warrants that (a) execution, delivery, and performance of this Lease has been duly authorized by all necessary action; that execution and performance hereof does not violate any judgment, order, agreement or regulation binding on Lessor or by which it is bound; (b) no consent from any person or entity is required; and (c) this Lease is fully binding and effective on Lessor.

ARTICLE XVII

ESTOPPEL CERTIFICATE

Lessor agrees that it will from time to time, upon twenty (20) days' written request by Lessee, execute and deliver to Lessee, or any person designated by Lessee, a statement in recordable form certifying that this Lease is unmodified and in full force and effect (or, if there have been modifications, that the Lease is in full force and effect as so modified), the date to which payments have been made, the then applicable amount of the Base Rent, and specifying that the Lessee is not in default under this Lease (or, alternatively, specifying the exceptions thereto), and such additional information that may be reasonably requested by Lessee.

ARTICLE XVIII

LESSOR'S LIABILITY

Except in the event of a wrongful eviction of Lessee by Lessor, Lessor's liability for breach of any covenant hereof shall be expressly limited to the recovery against the Lessor's interest in the Premises. If Lessor sells or transfers all or part of the Premises, and as a part of the transaction assigns its interest as Lessor in and to this Lease then, from and after the effective date of the sale, assignment, or transfer, Lessor shall have no further liability under this Lease to Lessee, except as to matters of liability which have accrued and are unsatisfied as of that date, it being intended that the covenants and obligations of Lessor contained in this Lease shall be binding on Lessor and its successors and assigns only during and in respect of their respective, successive periods of ownership of the fee estate.

ARTICLE XIX

FORCE MAJEURE

Whenever a period of time is herein prescribed for the taking of any action by either party, other than the payment of money, such party shall not be liable or responsible for, and there shall be excluded from the computation of such period, any delays due to strikes, riots, acts of God, shortages of labor or materials, war, governmental law, regulations or restrictions or any act, omission, delay, or neglect of the other party or any of the other party’s employees, representatives or agents, or any other cause whatsoever beyond the control of the obligated party, not to exceed sixty (60) days.

ARTICLE XX

RECORDATION

Neither party shall be precluded from recording this Lease; however, in lieu of such recordation either Lessor or Lessee, upon the request of the other, shall join in the execution of a memorandum or so called “short form” of this Lease for the purposes of recordation. Said memorandum or “short form” of this Lease shall describe the parties, the Premises and the Term of this Lease only and shall incorporate the other provisions of this Lease by reference.

ARTICLE XXI

QUIET ENJOYMENT

So long as Lessee shall timely and properly pay the Base Rent, and otherwise pay, perform and satisfy all other rental sums, charges, costs, expenses, obligations, duties and responsibilities required hereunder, Lessee shall during the Term hereof freely, peacefully and quietly enjoy and occupy the Premises for the Term of the Lease, subject only to the Permitted Exceptions and the terms and conditions hereof.

ARTICLE XXII

MISCELLANEOUS

22.01 Constructive Eviction. No entry upon the Premises by the Lessor, pursuant to the rights contained within this Lease, shall constitute an eviction or disturbance of Lessee’s use and enjoyment of the Premises or a breach by Lessor of any of its obligations hereunder, or render Lessor liable for damages for loss of business or otherwise, or entitle Lessee to be relieved from any of its obligations hereunder, or grant Lessee any right of set-off or recoupment or other remedy in connection with any such entry. However, Lessor agrees that no such entry upon the Premises shall unreasonably interfere with the conduct of Lessee’s business in the Premises.

22.02 No Oral Amendments. No amendment, modification, or alteration of the terms of this Lease shall be binding unless it is in writing, dated contemporaneous with or subsequent to the date of this Lease, and duly executed by the parties to this Lease.

22.03 No Waiver. Neither the acceptance of rental or other sums by Lessor nor the failure by Lessor to complain of any action, non-action or default of Lessee shall constitute a waiver of any of Lessor’s rights or otherwise diminish, reduce, discharge or release Lessee’s liability or obligations hereunder.

22.04 Notices. Any notice, demand, request or other communication required, given or made under or in connection with this Lease shall be deemed delivered, upon receipt, if hand delivered, or whether actually received or not, when deposited in a regular receptacle for the mail, sent by certified mail, return receipt requested, postage prepaid, addressed as follows:

- 22.07 Severability. In case any one or more of the provisions contained in this Lease shall for any reason be held to be invalid, illegal, or unenforceable in any respect, such invalidity, illegality, or unenforceability shall not affect any other provisions thereof, and this Lease shall be construed as if such invalid, illegal, or unenforceable provision had never been contained herein.

- 22.10 Counterparts. This Lease and all other copies of this Lease, insofar as they relate to the rights, duties, and remedies of the parties, shall be deemed to be one Lease. This Lease may be executed concurrently in one or more counterparts, each of which shall be deemed an original, but all of which together shall constitute one and the same instrument.
- 22.11 Entire Agreement. This Lease contains the entire agreement between the parties with respect to the subject matter hereof, and Lessor and Lessee hereby acknowledge that they are not relying on any representation or promise of the other, or of any agency or cooperating agent, except as may be expressly set forth in this Lease.
- 22.12 Captions. The captions used herein are for convenience only and do not limit or amplify the provisions hereof.
- 22.13 No Merger. So long as any Unit Mortgage is in existence, the fee title to the Premises and the leasehold estate of Lessee herein created by this Lease shall not merge but shall remain separate and distinct, notwithstanding the acquisition of said fee title and said leasehold estate by Lessor or a third party, by purchase or otherwise. Lessor and Lessee may not voluntarily agree to terminate this Lease without the consent of all Unit Mortgagees.
